Projecting the Future of Subsurface Characterization with Seismology: Technical Dialogues from the Next Generation of Geoscientists

WORKSHOP DESCRIPTION

The SEG Early Career and Student Global Workshop 2026 is a groundbreaking virtual event designed to empower the next generation of geoscientists. The workshop focuses on innovation, inclusion, and intergenerational collaboration, highlighting emerging research across key technical areas such as Artificial Intelligence (AI) in Geophysics, Carbon Capture Utilization and Storage (CCUS), Seismic Processing and Imaging, and Reservoir Characterization & Petrophysics. Spanning four dynamic half-day sessions, the program features keynote presentations from industry leaders, technical presentations, interactive panel discussions, and career development sessions. This thoughtfully designed format fosters meaningful mentorship, knowledge sharing, and networking among participants from academia, industry, and government sectors worldwide. As the first SEG global event dedicated exclusively to students and Early-Career professionals, this workshop provides sponsors with a unique opportunity to support emerging talent, enhance visibility within a global geoscience audience, and contribute to shaping the future of subsurface exploration and innovation.
